Here are two postcards together.

#001F is me pointing to where I am on a map of the world. The map is part of Mikasa Park, located on the waterfront adjacent to the Yokosuka Navy Base in Japan.

#009F is the typical Sunday traffic in the Shopping District of Yokosuka.

There are hundreds of stores in the district. You aren't even aware of most of them, unless you venture into some of the buildings. It looks like the first floor of the high rise buildings are the only stores, but then you take the escalators up 6-7 more floors of shops.

I have actually used chopsticks to eat. The first time was a little rough, but the second time, I was throwing back rice like there was no tomorrow.
