OOPS, somehow I pressed the send button before I was done....

After going through White Pass, I stopped to click some shots of the Rimrock Palisades, another geological wonder.

Then my plan was to go North on Route 123 through Mount Rainier National Park, but signs told me portions of the road were closed. Instead I took a little windy road called Skate Creek Road from Packwood to Ashford, then headed up to Puyallup (pronounced "pew-al-op" - if you don't say it right your tagged as a tourist) to visit friends and enjoy Fish Tacos.

Finally back to the hotel by 11:15 PM. Total miles for the day – 395.

Also attached (since I split the postcard in two, I can attach some more pics) are a Sunset from my hotel room, and Mount Rainier from a ferry ride early last week.

Cheers,
G.
