

Gary Worrell

From: Gary Worrell [gcw@igx.net]
Sent: 03 March, 2012 12:06
To: 'Gary Worrell'
Subject: Postcard

Hello, it's been a while.

I had to do a road trip yesterday, I had the latest version of TacomaCAM recording the event.

I bought a new HD camera for TacomaCAM. I made many test recordings to make sure I had enough disk space to record the 14 hour trek, but in the end I decided I'd have to knock back the resolution to get it all to fit on my computer hard drive. Unfortunately, when I changed the resolution setting from 1920x1080 (1080p) to 1280x720 (720p, for reference, the previous videos were 640x480), it changed another camera setting unbeknownst to me. The result of having that wrong setting was that the computer was so busy trying to process the high definition video that it couldn't keep up, so the video has skips.

The final video was mostly a loss. But I won't disappoint you, here are the last few miles:

<http://igx.net/Video/TacomaCAM/120302LastLegOfTheTrip.wmv>

It's less than a minute long. Even more so than before (because of the higher resolution), it may not run smooth until after it's completely downloaded. You may want to copy it to your desktop first.

Cheers,
G.