Hello from the Pacific Northwest.

I've been out here for a couple of weeks, but I didn't get to do any sightseeing. I tried to arrange a one hour helicopter tour around the Olympic Mountains, but it just wasn't meant to be. There's always a next time.

I did, however, set up BalconyCAM and grabbed a week of time-lapse video of the dynamic weather over Oyster Bay:

It's eleven minutes long at 1280x720 (720P, low resolution HD video) and as usual, it takes a bit of time to load. One frame every 30 seconds, played back at 30 frames per second. That works out to fifteen minutes of real time compressed down to one second. And, since it's a relatively high Latitude (for the continental US) coupled with the longest daylight time of the year (North of the Tropic Region), the nights go by pretty quick. Attached are some stills extracted from the video.

Today I'm officially closer to 60 than 50, and I get to celebrate by spending the entire day traveling home. Right now, I can't think of a better birthday gift.

Cheers,
G.
